TIENTSIN, July 28—Forty-five Japanese warplanes, including heavy bombers, roared from Tientsin airfields at dawn today to support a major Japanese offensive against Chinese barracks guarding Pelping. Troops moved to encircle Peiping itself, carrying out the Tientsin Japanese command's warning that it was taking "free action" to force withdrawal of Chinese troops from Peiping and neighboring barracks. Some regarded the warning as a virtual declaration of war by the Japanese. NANKING, July 28.— A high official of the Chinese foreign office declared to-day, "we accept the issue of battle." ### Current Comment

The English conception of policy is not in the least military. It is mercantile. We conduct our diplomacy, not as heroic warriers, but at arther timid shopkeepers. Except in rare moments of aberration (the worst of which occurred in 1919) we are not out for speciacular diplomatic victories or sensational trials of sterngth. What we are after in a profitable deal, and we know from imposes conditions which are incapable of sexecution, or leaves our customers devoid of all powers of purchase.

The English interpretation of prestige is that of "power based on reputation rather than beguing the properties of the properties of the power and the

Poems That Live

AN OLD MAN'S SONG Ye are young, ye are young, I am old, I am old; And the song has been sung And the story been told.

Your locks are as brown As the mavis in Moy, Your hearts are as warm As the sunshine today. But mine white and cold As the snow on the brae

And Love, like a flower, Is growing for you, Hands clasping, lips meet Hearts beating so true; While Fame like a star In the midnight afar Is flashing for you.

For you the To-come, But for me the Gone-by, You are penting to live, I am waiting to die: The meadow is empty, No flower groweth high, And naught but a socket The face of the sky.

Yea, howso we dream,
Or how bravely use do;
The end is the some,
Be we traitor or true:
And after the bloom
And the passion is past,
Death cometh at last.
